Goob,

Well we made it through another year dude just like we have in the past. So im pretty sure well make it through at least one more since that's all ive got left. But i just thought you ought to know i think of you as my best pal and to receive that honor you've got to be a pretty cool bitch so i think you fit that category.

Hey Goober,
Have a great summer and keep that hair up. Don't do any thing to Illegal. Fun, above all else have fun, your friend, Fred.

Your Pal,

Goob,
Hey darling. you've been stupendous to me. you're quite unique! See you next year!
Jazybal

Goober,

So you made it out of the 10th grade. AMAZING! Even though Spanish class sucked it was pretty cool back here with you and Karma. So I guess I'll see ya next year.

Friends

Chris,
I don't give you mean and ugly looks! And if I did I'm sorry. You are a real nice guy. A man of deep thought. Different from most guys I know. Even though we didn't talk much I enjoyed having you as a friend. I'll see ya!

Chris,

This year has gone by so fast. But it's just one year. We've still got two more. It's kinda funny how things go. I'm so glad I was able to meet you and share a class with you. I'm just sorry we became so distant so soon. But, as life goes things don't always stay the way you want them. To you a really good person Chris. You make the world smile. You don't judge a person without getting to know them, yet you are sensitive to everyone's feelings. You light up the world with your smile and good nature. Stay that way don't ever change. Always remember those friends you made along the way and the friends you will make. You have found love & happiness with Diane never let it go. Have a terrific summer. Stay safe. Don't get in to much trouble. I know how hard it can be though.

Friends always,
Denise

Coming from near and far We all come 'Together As One'

You enter a humid, brick building on a warm September morning. Faces of nameless people stare back at you as you pass through the doorway. As you take your seat, usually away from everyone else, others file through the door and search for a seat away from the crowd. Sooner than you had hoped, someone sits next to you. That difficult first word has always paralyzed the possible beginnings of a good friendship. This is an all too familiar scene. Everyone must go through this awkward first. No place like the classroom on your first day of school is it more apparent. What makes this so difficult is the multitude of personalities that attend Kellam everyday. Perhaps the best way to describe the students, faculty and staff of Kellam is to say that they are a unique blend of personalities and characters.

As soon as school began in September, everyone was surprised by the massive number of students that would be attending Kellam this year, over 2,000. New faces of students and teachers greeted the juniors and seniors. Sophomores came to create a new beginning for themselves. Ahead of each of them would be a great challenge to attain their personal best. This year brought together many different people and aspects of Kellam.

This year brought a new principal to our school. Mr. Frank Peele began the year with the high hopes of many teachers, students and parents that changes were just around the corner. As with any change, it takes time for attitudes, habits and sometimes fears to be altered. It is difficult on many to make changes in their lifestyle and work place, but tried we did while learning from our failures and our successes.

As usual, Kellam students excelled in their areas of expertise. Honors were awarded to many students in sports, service, and academics.

Every student expressed his or her individuality through music, dress and even hairstyle. Trends were of great interest at Kellam — not following them, but setting them. While some of Kellam's students were setting trends, many were content to follow tradition. Homecoming and the dance, shopping at the mall, going to work and just hanging out were the orders of the day for most of the students at Kellam.

Students gather immediately after school to plan what they will be doing later that day. Stopping to allow others to catch up and join in the conversation assure that all the possibilities are covered.

While this year has been a culmination of the lifestyle of the people of Kellam, we can not forget the time and talents of the faculty and staff.

It is through the efforts of the teachers, administrators and guidance counselors that you are provided with the opportunity to learn and enhance you growth and creativity. The custodial, cafeteria, transportation and office staff assure that you are surrounded by a safe, tidy, organized operation. These are the people that are behind the scenes and perhaps the easiest to forget, but they are crucial to the operation of Kellam.

Just as the people who create Kellam have come from many backgrounds, not to mention many different places, the events, ideas, and thoughts of every individual have come together as one to create this year at Kellam. From the multitude of events and emotions that have created this year, only a select few will remain in our mind for years to come. We have all come together as one here at Kellam, and this represents us to the world as the best that Virginia Beach can offer.

A warm sunny day makes a great opportunity for Nathan Carter, junior, Liam Brennan, senior, and Richard Cobb, sophomore, to sit and talk. Students often take part of their lunch bell to unwind outside before going back to class.

At the Homecoming dance, Felicia Keefer and Joel Higgins, senior, take a few minutes from the music and dancing to catch their breath.

Together As One

In looking back on the events of a school year, I am tempted to view the school year in terms of football games, report cards, crowded lunches and pep rallies. However, life does not end at two o'clock. Many students work after school or hunt for that special place to catch the perfect wave. Some simply relax in their cars and just love the road just enough to wait for the blaring of the car windows. Whether you cheer for the Fat Boys, U2 or even Hank Williams Jr., the music you listen to is who you are and an expression of yourself. The way that we close our doors and make the school the people go. Because everyone is different, the school itself takes on many faces. For some students, school is a place to pass the time during the day. For others, it is an opportunity to share and absorb knowledge for the benefit of all. We have created something in Virginia Beach which is unique to Kellam. The blend of suburban and inner-city backgrounds has created a school that stands second to none. Despite our likes and dislikes, we have been brought together as one to create a unique life for Kellam students.

Homecoming night was filled with anxiety and excitement for Homecoming Queen candidates Teresa W. Sak, senior, Susan Noon, senior, and DeShane Perry, senior. They were riding around the football field in a Trans Am as part of the Homecoming parade.

Students gather on the front lawn during their free time at lunch to catch up on gossip and make plans for after school.

Student Life

So many different tunes,

In one corner you'll hear Motley Crue blaring from a passing car; you might hear Hank Williams Jr. and then behind it all you'll hear the popular music and artists like Genesis, Rush, U2, Aretha Franklin and Billy Idol. You might imagine this to be an open air concert in Virginia Beach, but it's only the parking lot of Kellam High School after school. Each student believes that their own type of music is the best that the music industry has to offer. You can find several different someone for listening to many types of music, and this is supported by Lance Schott.

"I listen to all kinds of music because it all has a certain appeal, and it all has a certain meaning. I change music when I change moods."

— Lance Schott
Senior

when he said, "I listen to all kinds of music because it all has a certain appeal, and it all has a certain meaning. I change music when I change moods."

Perhaps the most popular type of music is the one commonly called soft rock or pop rock.

These are the artists like Huey Lewis, Genesis, Michael Jackson, Kool & the Gang, and many others. The middle of the road music is it is sometimes called, often lends itself to many different types of people. Jeff Barnes said that the reason he listens to pop music is because "the lyrics have meaning." More Christian rock artists are beginning to enter this area of music and are doing quite well. Amy Grant for instance.

— Jeff Barnes
Junior

Hard rock can usually be found on many students' turntables, cassette decks, and car stereos. The image of many groups like Motley Crue, AC/DC, Poison, Quiet Riot, Iron Maiden, Metallica and many others have sometimes been labeled as sinister and morally corrupt. This bad rap came for so many different tastes from the stage performances of rock hard rockers as Ozzy Osbourne and early Alice Cooper. "I think a lot of people put the wrong image with it, they stereotype it," said junior, Aimee Dean. Even though most adults relate hard rock with narcotic drugs, the majority of listeners may have never tried any form of drug at all. Dean went on to say that this image is misleading "because I don't do drugs or anything." Even though many hard rock albums now come with a warning label to alert parents and the buyer that the contents of the album might contain mature subject matter.

"I think a lot of people put the wrong image with it [hard rock], they stereotype it."

— Aimee Dean
Sophomore

Country music, even though not every popular with many students, can still be heard in many cars after school. Perhaps the most popular of the country music artists are Hank Williams Jr., Waylon Jennings, Alabama and Randy

Ford. Despite the strange stereotypes, many play their country music with pride. This was proved by Heather Bacho when she said:

"Country music tells a story about life, not melodramatic happenings, just plain and simple life."

— Heather Bacho
Junior

Country music tells a story about life, not melodramatic happenings, just plain and simple life.

Foreign imports have now become a growing form of music in the United States and here at Kellam. The trends that have followed this music can be seen everyday in the hallways. Hairstyles, clothing trends and dance fads have all come across the ocean from Europe. These groups began with uproar and fanfare over their controversial lyrics and images. Now, they have become more commonplace in the everyday music we all listen to.

What we won't do for A little spending money

"I'd like an order of fries, please." "Excuse me! Can you help me please?" Punch in, punch out — it's something that many Kellam students do everyday afterschool and on weekends. Work fills the 'free' time of many. From fastfood, to department stores, to construction, the list of jobs held by high school students is endless.

Work, for many students, is a necessary part of their life. Perhaps they are working to buy their first automobile or to hopefully pay for college someday. Many just work for that little bit of extra spending money for the weekends.

Mike Hinefeld works because it "keeps me out of trouble and a little extra spending money in my pocket." Students sometimes find it difficult to balance both work and school. It can create serious problems for them academically. First bell can be very difficult to maneuver when you worked the night before. Trying to convince the teacher that you are really paying attention while you're also trying to catch up on the sleep you missed last night is never easy.

Unfortunately, work lives up to its name — work is never easy. It has become a necessary part of high school life that many must try their best to get through.

Carefully bagging groceries, junior Mike Cosca, is sure not to pack the bags too heavy or put any item where it may get crushed.

Stacking eggs is a move up for senior Ruben Guanzon who started working at Farm Fresh as a cashier. He is now in charge of stock in the frozen food department.

Service with a smile is what senior Jimmy Collison gives as he ladles out soup for a waiting customer. Collison works at the snackbar in Farm Fresh.

Recordkeeping is an important part of retail clothing sales for senior citizens. Aleanza Arganza is filling out the purchase ticket for a customer.

On a roll again, Frank Matyiko (center) plows through the line as a Hopewell player attempts to tackle him. Jason Frye, Doug Lopez, Bobby Niedbala and Tim Johnston close in to help Matyiko gain yardage.

Anticipation to disappointment, A Homecoming celebration

In the cool night air, a sense of anticipation could be found in every aspect of the Homecoming activities. Would Kellam make this a Homecoming to remember?

Each day of Homecoming week spotlighted a specific activity for the students. From classes wearing their colors to 'dressing as your club day, the week's activities were used to create an atmosphere of excitement and anticipation. The pep rally was the climax of the week's activities. As the pep rally began, it was a slow process as cheerleaders, coaches and the band did their best to gain vocal support for the team and the Homecoming activities.

As the pep rally progressed, and each class was challenged as to their amount of spirit, it was the seniors and juniors who took up the challenge. The two classes battled in trying to out yell the other. When it was all over, the judges had declared that the seniors had shown more spirit than the other two classes.

The coaches had their opportunity to encourage the students to come to the game and support the team. Introductions of the senior members of the football team were also part of the afternoon as a way to say 'thanks' to these members for all their hard work and dedication.

With the preliminary activities out of the way, the moment that most parents, teachers and students had come to see was about to begin — kickoff. All the anxiety and anticipation peaked as the ball was sent twirling into the air. The game had begun.

By halftime the story was not as many would have wanted. Kellam was behind. But everyone knew that there was still hope. Everyone situated themselves for the presentation of the Homecoming Queen candidates and the court. After each candidate was introduced the fateful moment arrived. The 1987 Homecoming Queen was Josie Burroughs.

After the queen's acceptance walk, the second half of the game was quickly started, but the outcome was less than anticipated. Kellam lost to Hopewell. Awaiting the students in the cafeteria was the Homecoming dance.

The informal affair was attended by several students who wanted to dance into the night with the music provided by the 'Mockers.' The evening was filled with fast paced music and dance.

The outcome of this year's Homecoming may not have been what was expected, but it was nonetheless a time that many will not forget.

Dancing their way through the crowd,

$$P_{\text{max}} = \frac{\gamma}{\gamma + 1} \left(\frac{c_p}{R} T_0 \right)^{\frac{\gamma + 1}{\gamma - 1}}$$

Marching into the stadium, kickoff of the Homecoming game

The video game craze may not be the newest in leisure time activities, but Alvin Armstrong (foreground) and James Goode are satisfied with spending their time at Aladdin's Castle playing Ghostbusters.

Not a new sport to the Beach, surfing is probably one of the most common ways students spend their leisure time. Eric Coulson shows how well he can maneuver the waves.

Mt. Trashmore skateboarding is another popular leisure time activity for many students. Mike Conroy performs a skateboarding maneuver called a "sad plant."

A little more time for

That relaxing diversion

Leisure is a word that means many things to many people. It can be a quiet time to read or visit with friends, but to many students, it means time best spent surfing, skateboarding, playing video games, riding a horse, or some other physical activity. Some people spend most of their time dreaming up leisure time activities. With today's hectic pace, it is often too difficult to plan regular activities. Between school, work and family commitments, finding time to do things for ourselves is about to become a thing of the past. The years we spend in high school are often difficult times when it comes to separating the 'have to do' from the 'would like to do'.

Students always tend to be creative in their means of recreation. Many have been able to take their hobbies and recreational activities on to the point of city, state and even national competitions. You may find that some leisure time activity that you have might turn into a life's work.

We are always asked what our hobbies or interests are by our friends, relatives, employers and even on college admission applications. It makes you wonder why so many people are interested in what you are doing outside of school. One reason many want to know is to find out how you spend your free time. Do you spend it in front of the television like almost everyone or do you find some creative means to help you unwind while also keeping yourself active?

Leisure activities don't seem too important until you find yourself without time to participate in them. You then suddenly realize how important those few minutes can be. If you don't have a leisure activity, then now is the best time to get one. Talk to your friends and find out what they do, then take a look at yourself. Soon you will find something that you have always wanted to do but convinced yourself you could never do or couldn't find the time. Set aside an hour or two each day or each week for your new found hobby. You'll soon find that this little bit of time you spend can help you cope with life just a little easier and provides a great outlet for all those little frustrations we all experience from time to time.

Time to relax is hard to come by for John Geluso. When Geluso finds time away from school and baseball, he likes to unwind by playing the organ.

Hours in the mall is a favorite pastime for many students at Keiam. Jason Adams (background) is out with friends spending his leisure time in Lynnhaven Mall.

As the curtain goes up It's suddenly showtime

Curtain time is here, and it's time to get ready for the performance. The students of the York-School District's drama club are preparing for their first performance of the year, "The Addams Family," which they will perform on Friday, October 10, at 7:30 p.m. in the auditorium of the York-School District's high school. The club has been working hard to prepare for this performance, and they are excited to share their work with the community. The New York production of "The Addams Family" is a musical comedy that follows the story of the Addams family, a group of eccentric and wealthy people who live in a large, old house in New York City. The story is based on the comic strip by Charles Addams, which was first published in 1938. The musical was created by Robert Addams and is a popular show that has been performed in many theaters around the world. The York-School District's drama club is proud to be part of this production, and they are looking forward to a successful performance.

A clean locker is a necessity — every once in a while. Felicia Keeler discusses her reasoning for her locker cleaning with Mary Mikovits.

The touches of home in a 5 foot box

Streams of crumpled paper. Unique wrapping. Balloons and party favors. During any school day, any of these locker decorations may be found adorning a locker in any hallway at Kellam. Every locker at Kellam takes on the personality of its owner. Around the cutouts, the girlfriend's or boyfriend's picture, a mirror, the note pad, and the brush & comb set, can be seen the textbooks lurking in the dark reaches of the locker. Some are neatly arranged — everything in their place. Many lockers become the last minute dumping grounds for a day's accumulation of paper and homework assignments.

These small vertical spaces spend their life being slammed, banged, kicked, punched and basically beaten. Despite all this, the locker remains unscathed — well almost. Students are frustrated daily by lockers that refuse to open or maybe the door just plain fell off. Whatever the problem, the locker will always be a symbol of what students must endure as part of life at Kellam.

Conferences at the locker after school are the best way for Stephanie Willet and Jesse Goranson to catch each other before they leave to go home.

The Neptune Festival had much to offer from various walks of life. There was plenty to eat and good entertainment from different cultures. Rock bands played the crowd's favorite songs.

Once again Kellam showed its dedication to the community through its participation in the many festival events. "More came together than just sand," replied Nancy Wood. The participants in the Sandcastle Classic remember the third place award they received for their sand sculpture of a sunken treasure chest.

The Art Club submitted their works to the art show. The Key Club sold peanuts and coke and a few of our students competed in the surfing and body boarding contests.

The event that started off Saturday's phenomenal affair was the Marching Marlin Classic which our very own Kellam Marching Knights competed in and won first place. Later that afternoon the marching Knights, the Thespians and Reach marched in the annual Neptune Festival parade. All in all, it was a busy day for everyone. After the day was done, folks relaxed and enjoyed the fireworks display and Kim Strong commented that "it was the best fireworks display I've ever seen."

With the weather at its best, the entertainment at its height, and with friendly people all around the 1987 Neptune Festival was considered a success by everyone.

Together As One

There are many aspects of life that make up what we call Kellen. One important aspect is the role that the faculty play in the everyday life of the students at Kellen. No other group comes into contact and provides a greater influence on the students than the teachers, guidance counselors, and administrative staff. Even though these groups have daily contact with students, there are others who also play a part in this daily contact. Many feel that, whether the impact that the librarians, the cafeteria workers and the custodial staff have on the lives of the students and other members of the faculty. Each group in their own way works toward one common goal: to bring an environment of learning and understanding. The faculty serves as a service to clubs, sports, publications, service organizations, and many other school activities. The cafeteria workers and custodial staff work diligently to assure that the school and grounds stay in a manner that will reflect well on Kellen. The faculty have come from many places and backgrounds of Virginia and have come together as one with one goal in mind—the success of Kellen students.

New ideas for a new job

Starting a new job is never easy, but one that is as important as the job of superintendent of Virginia Beach schools becomes an even tougher task. Dr. James E. Melvin accepted this position on July 1, 1967. His appointment ended a nationwide search of applicants that took nearly six-months to complete. Dr. Melvin came to Virginia Beach from Ft. Myers, Florida. Dr. Melvin helped to make several changes in the Ft. Myers school system and hope to use his experience to help our school system to continue to grow and improve. Dr. Melvin stated that "we're going to build an even greater school system."

Dr. Melvin stated that he wants to take our school system of Virginia Beach, with the help of staff and community, from "the threshold of greatness — and take it into the greatness it deserves."

Time out from work is not easy to find for Dr. James E. Melvin. Dr. Melvin takes time out for a quick picture in his office at the school administration building.

The new man in charge

There seems to be a lot of new faces around Kellam this year. The one face that many students are trying to remember is that of Mr. Frank Peele, the new principal. Peele brings with him a air of change and renewed interest in the school that many have been waiting for years to see. Changes in the operation of the school and the amount of student activities that occur during the year.

Walking around the school during the day is something which many at Kellam are not familiar. Not every principal takes the interest in his students and staff as Peele does. He believes that these small little things are just as important as what goes on in his office.

A man of conviction and a firm belief in the knowledge of where he wants to be and what needs to be done is the image that Peele projects to teachers and parents alike. The belief that efforts by administrators, faculty, students and parents are essential to the success of any school is the ideal that surrounds every action of the principal.

Change, in any form, is always a slow process. Trying to change the habits and traditions of over 2,000 people can seem like a process that could likely take years to occur. The pockets of apathy that can develop over many years are difficult to overcome. This challenge might make others think twice, but Peele accepts it willingly and works daily to speed the process along.

The newest kid on the block

Everyday you can see her walking down the halls making sure everything is in order. Most people usually don't recognize Elizabeth Porter, because like Mr. Frank Peele, the principal, she is a new administrator at Kellam.

Porter taught English for two years at Kecoughtan High School and nine years at Charlottesville High School. After spending eleven years in teaching, she "was looking for a different challenge."

Constant paperwork is just part of the job for Elizabeth Porter. Porter was adding comments on a referral form.

She learned that her master's degree in education met the qualifications for becoming an assistant principal. In 1986 she became assistant principal at Kempsville Junior High School. She moved to Kellam just this year.

Porter tries to be friendly with the students she meets and "just try to get to know them a little bit." Education is so interesting to her because, "every year is different and special."

Concentration shows on the face of Porter as she watches the gymnastics team compete against Princess Anne.

Part of the job of any counselor is listening to students concerns and problems. Libby Predmore listens to a student as he describes his day

Mounds of paperwork cover the desk of many counselors. Gerry MacIver works diligently as she fills out a schedule change for a student

A little guidance never hurts

Every day, guidance counselors help students through the most difficult and confusing times of their life

From being a personal confidant to handling and preparing personal records, counselors cover all the bases of a students life. Libby Predmore, head guidance counselor, explained that each day, counselors help students set goals, make decisions, understand their potential and abilities, and "deal with reality." Predmore explained that counselors also act as a "hason between student and home, student and school, and student and community."

Each counselor is responsible for about 390 students, not counting new students who come in every day. This means late hours of paperwork, writing letters of recommendation, and making home contacts. Despite the hard work, "I'm employed for one reason, and that is to help you," explained Predmore.

Most counselors love their job, despite the obstacles they face. Predmore stated her belief that "somehow you're making a difference something with which most counselors would agree. When asked if all the hard work, long hours, and strain are worth it, Predmore proudly responded, "You better believe it."

To find room In the library to work is often difficult for the librarians. Sandra Rister finds room on top of some shelves in the middle of the library to finish her paperwork.

Booking on work and fun

Not many people know that most librarians have a master's degree in their field or that some are former teachers.

As a matter of fact, Donald Burns and Kelly McCoy are former history and English teachers, respectively. Five years of college is the norm for most librarians. Most librarians enjoy their work. They share a love for literature and teaching. Expressing her excitement about literature, McCoy explains that "it's like Christmas," when you open boxes of new books.

Keeping 175 students quiet during their lunch bell is not everyone's idea of fun. She jokingly says that you "have to talk softly and carry a big stick." The librarians enjoy working with students and understand that it's tough to be quiet, but what most upsets them, McCoy says, is that the loud students "waste their time and my time."

Checking out books to students and teachers is only one part of the responsibilities that librarians like Donald Burns must face everyday.

The often forgotten, but important people

The clinic is perhaps the most often used, sometimes abused, office at Kellam High School. Even though the clinic is here to provide assistance to those who are ill, it sometimes becomes a haven for students who have tests that day. Determining a true illness from simple anxiety is never easy, but after more than 12 years of experience, Kowalski has become adept at spotting those students who tend to use illness as an excuse.

Even though the nurse has been trained for a variety of emergencies, Carol Kowalski finds that most clinic visits are because of simple ailments like a headache. Kowalski also has an entourage of 'regulars' that make clinic visits every now and then. Whatever the reason may be, Kowalski stands ready to provide help for any student who should need it.

After completing a specialized program in school nursing at State University College at Plattsburgh, New York, Kowalski began a tour of the United States. Her excursion across the United States is understandable when you realize that she is a navy wife. After nursing jobs in Massachusetts, Texas, New York and Florida, her husband was finally transferred to the Virginia Beach area.

Kowalski enjoys living in Virginia Beach because "it's a bit like where I was raised in upstate New York." Working at Kellam for 12 years has been an enjoyable experience for Kowalski because, she says, "it's a nice comfortable setting." Her positive attitude toward her job could be due to the fact that she has "a lot of good people to work with... which can make or break a job."

Always pleasant, school nurse Carol Kowalski, greets students as they enter. Even though she may not be a doctor her pleasant attitude and concern can always make you feel a little better.

From egg-beaters to opera

Leanne Self has always been interested in singing. As a child, she used an egg-beater as a microphone to sing along with the radio and her love of singing has never diminished.

With a background in church productions, Self soon made her mark during her high school years at Princess Anne High School as a Madrigal and by being selected to All State Chorus.

She continued her interest in singing by majoring in voice at Radford University. While at Radford, Self performed in many operas including Bastien and Bastienne, originally written by Mozart. After attending Radford for one year, she transferred to Virginia Wesleyan College, where during her junior year, she won first place soprano in her division in a contest sponsored by the National Association of Teachers of Singing. During her last year of college, she attended a

New York opera institute to study opera. With the help and opportunities available at this institute, Self gained leads in many operas like Faust and The Marriage of Figaro. After graduating from college, Self joined the Virginia Opera Association for three seasons.

But during college, Self realized that singing as a career would be too demanding and unstable, so she switched her major to English. Juggling opera, singing and teaching proved to be a strain also, "I was having to grade papers backstage," Self explained. So, after her third season, she decided to devote her time to teaching, "a job you never leave." Self still sings at weddings, church productions and for social groups. Maybe one day she will find the time to be involved in opera, yet still have time to be a teacher. "I'll just have to work a little harder to get it done."

Division to dance, it all adds up

Even though it is generally considered a "sissy kind of thing," ballet is a physically demanding and entertaining art, just ask Steve Schmitter. Schmitter, who teaches math, has danced with the Old Dominion Ballet and the Virginia Beach Community Ballet. Schmitter became deeply interested in dancing when he joined a folk dancing group in college who later introduced him to modern dance and ballet. Later, he joined the Virginia Beach Community Ballet and the Old Dominion Ballet.

Since joining the company at ODU, Schmitter has performed in the full-length ballet productions of Cinderella, Classical Symphony, Romantic Rhapsody and other original works. Also during the company's performances of The Nutcracker last December, Schmitter played a leading role as the Snow King. Three months before the present ation of The Nutcracker the dancers were already preparing daily for their scenes. The male dancer has the hardest role in that it requires the dancer to jump, dance and lift his partner with grace and skill throughout the entire performance. These physical demands are why Schmitter calls ballet a "great athletic challenge." The tough rehearsals and performance schedules created a strong bond of friendship between dance partners. His partner and he were invited to perform back in her native country of Japan.

Schmitter, despite the hard work, loves to perform. "If someone appreciates what you do, and lets you know... it's exciting," he said about performing before an audience. Even though he takes pride in his performances, Schmitter humbly states that ballet is "just a serious hobby."

Dramatic expression is an important part of the ballet that Stephen Schmitter and his partner rehearse for their ODU production of "The Nutcracker."

First bell study hall is just one of the school time duties that Steve Schmitter performs during the day.

"If someone appreciates what you do, and lets you know... it's exciting!"

Together As One

Even though every person is an individual, they often want to find a place to express themselves. The organizations at Kellam help to foster an environment that will allow these students to be themselves while they learn and help others. One way that some Kellam students want to express their individuality is through the organizations they join. Academic organizations exist to better the education and learning of the students who enjoy the pursuit of knowledge. Service organizations exist to better not only the student but the school and community as well. Sports and vocational organizations work to foster a better future experience in its members. Student organizations strive to better themselves while using the organization to improve their areas of weakness. Organizations exist for the students to grow in character. Each organization strives to bring out the best in each student. Even though the organizations at Kellam have different goals, they all work together to create an environment to give Kellam the best possible student. All the organizations working together is one to create an opportunity for students to express their individuality.

The Distributive Education Clubs of America sponsored a reception for the foreign exchange students that attend Kellam. Faculty, students, and administrators were invited to greet the newest visitors to America and Kellam.

Aside from school, Page holds a part time job with Albano cleaners at the beach and takes dance lessons every Tuesday night. She has been taking dance since she was three. It all started with ballet lessons, and then she moved on to jazz and tap dancing during her preteen years. Page refers to the tap, jazz, and ballet she performs as her "...outlet from everyday pressures," and the thing she enjoys most

SPRIT OF KELLAM

The Spirit of Kellam is a group dedicated to raising school spirit and pride. The members strive to promote school activities that demonstrate the pride that students have in Kellam and in Virginia Beach. Fundraising projects help to pay for the materials and activities that SOK participates in during the year. The members goal is to promote spirit on an individual basis and to share that spirit with everyone in the student body. At athletic events, club meetings, and even in the classroom SOK members do their best to represent the spirit of Kellam students. SOK members are the ones cheering the loudest, participating the most and enjoying their high school years. The next time you're covered in confetti at a ballgame, or amused by a sign wishing the athletic teams good luck, you can thank the members of SOK. They're the members that are trying to make your days at Kellam as spirited as possible.

The staff works after school and during the journalism class bell to put together the articles and photographs for the newspaper. The newspaper is published two to four times yearly. The purpose of The Roundtable is to provide an outlet for student concerns and interests. The newspaper also provides a functional laboratory for journalism students and volunteers to exercise their skills and talents in a moderated 'near' real world setting of journalism. In 1987, The Roundtable was selected by the Virginia High School League as one of the best newspapers in the state by selecting Kellam's newspaper as a Trophy Class publication. The adviser is Ms. Lynn Adams who teaches English and journalism.

A singing float is what the Madrigals brought to this year's float competition held during the pre-game activities at the Homecoming game.

Officer's meetings after school brought Lisa Lodge, Paul King, Andrea Meals, and Christy Romero together to discuss arrangements for upcoming performances with Ms. Scarangella.

So many choices

For the musical ear

The lights go on and a hum of voices radiates over the crowd and you know that the choral concert has begun. The concert was one of two put on by the chorus department during the year. Kellam has three choral groups: Madrigals, Concert and Mixed Chorus, and Show Choir.

Paul King, a Madrigal, said "it's like a family, we try our hardest to be the best." It takes months of practice to put on a show that's as perfect as it can be. With all the hard work and dedication by the cast, in the end, the show turns out to be well worth all the effort.

Many students have been part of Kellam's choral groups, and through it all, behind the curtain with fingers crossed, Ms. Scarangella remains as the guiding influence behind the successes.

The 1988 Kellam Show Choir is a select group of students chosen from the madrigals who have demonstrated a clear and precise understanding of vocal artistry and have an aptitude for dance. The programs presented by the show choir included the winter and spring concerts as well as city-wide musical competitions. The group strives to demonstrate a mastery of many musical types as well as their ability to perform those numbers in a stage performance. Costumes, songs and dance are a must for all members of the show choir. The show choir represents the culmination of all the stage arts. Only well-rounded individuals are asked to become part of the show choir. The practice schedule for the show choir is demanding, but each member knows that he or she must pull their weight to make the show perfect. To be asked to part of the show choir is an honor that the members accept with pride.

Beyond the classroom

Learning a language takes more

Very few students go onto take the fourth year of a language after being required to take the first three years for an academic diploma. Matt Evans is one of those few. He has not only gone on, but he also enjoys learning a foreign language, in his case German. "I'm really into German," he remarked. It's with that desire to experience German that Even with Matt's enthusiasm for the German language he still finds it difficult to learn. "It's tough, sometimes you get to the end of a sentence and forget what you were saying to begin with," he comments.

Leadership and involvement can lead to

A month of 'National' honor

And this month the National Honor Society would like to honor that special, bright, spirited student. It could be you. With as many students at Kellam that would fit the special, bright, spirited student description, the Honor Society has a hard time choosing just one citizen of the month. Considering the fact that there are only nine months of school that doesn't provide the honor society with much time to recognize all the students it would like.

The Honor Society's citizen of the month award provides the members of the honor society with a rare opportunity. The award is one of the very few in which peers decide on the recipient based on his or her involvement in school.

It's often asked exactly how the honor society comes to the decision of who to honor. It's not a complicated process. The most qualified people are nominated by student members of the Honor Society. The nominees who display the qualities of leadership, scholarship, service, and character, are then voted on by those attending the Honor Society's monthly meeting.

Laughing at a comment, Melanie Mina announces March's Citizen of the Month.

TIDEWATER CHALLENGE TEAM

The Tidewater Challenge Team is a select group of students who try their hand at a knowledge trivia game called Tidewater Challenge. The game is broadcast on Channel 15 WHRO-TV, the public broadcasting station for Hampton Roads. The group must be well-rounded because the questions asked may cover any discipline. The areas of art, history, psychology, science, English, literature and government are but a few of the possible categories of questions. The group represents what could be considered the best minds that Kellam has to offer. To be a part of the team is source of pride for the members. The team prepares by asking each other trivia type questions that would most likely be asked during the game. Usually, one member is given the responsibility of being the expert in one particular subject area. The members responsibility is to learn all he or she can about that subject so they will be prepared.

Peer education and support

Reaching for solutions

Today's students face more challenges and pressures than ever before. Students tend to call on others who they believe can help — their friends. REACH (Responsible Educated Adolescents Can Help) was created for this purpose. The aim of REACH is to educate students about the dangers of drug and alcohol abuse and subsequent addiction.

REACH members understand the problems caused by peer pressure and stress to conform. Despite beliefs to the contrary, pressure doesn't become easier as you grow older, said REACH sponsor Denise Barrineau. What REACH members hope to do is keep a teen away from a dependency on alcohol and drugs through education.

REACH has begun a program to educate the children at the elementary ages about the dangers of drug and alcohol dependency.

Emotions and cast changes make it a night of

One act right after another

There was a flicker of the lights, the audience took their seats and that was it months worth of anxiety ended. The months of preparation, the late days at school, the flaring emotions, and the many cast changes were over. The 'Night of One-Acts' had finally come.

The 'Night of One-Acts' included the only performance of two student productions of one-act plays, "Sorry, Wrong Number" by Lucille Fletcher and "Coming Through the Rye" by William Saroyan. The night proved to be exciting for not only the cast and crew but also the audience which witnessed two fine performances by Kellam's thespian troupe.

At the end of the night there was relief and excitement in the faces of all the cast and crew of both productions. They had come through all the hard work and emotions to put on two successful one-act plays.

DRAMA CLUB AND THESPIANS

Drama and Thespian Troupe members, with the assistance and advising of their sponsor Ms. Grub, traditionally perform a play and a musical each year. This fall the group performed Runaways. A special feature this year included a night of one-act plays, Sorry Wrong Number, directed by Kathie Ward and Coming Through The Rye, directed by Lance Schott were produced in February. The one-act plays also competed in the Beach District One-Act Festival. The musical was not presented this year due to staffing and technical problems. In place of the spring musical one three act play and one to two one act plays were planned. The members of the group are derived from the drama classes. The purpose of the group is to give members drama experience in a stage setting in front of an audience. The goal is to provide a near real-life setting of the theatre and its workings. Props and sets are designed and built by drama club members.

Marching to the top

Another trophy appears in the showcase and everyone knows that the Kellam High School Marching Knights had shown their superiority at the latest band competition. Through pride, determination, and teamwork the Kellam Band has earned the respective reputation as one of the best marching bands in the state.

Behind the success of the band is not just fun and games. It is in reality a great deal of hard work. The band doesn't take just anyone. Each member of the band is required to audition. The audition determines the player's position and chair placement.

Competition is commonplace for Kellam's Marching Knights. They ended last season with a total of 44 first and second place trophies. The competition for the band, as far as competition goes, is the spring trip. This year the band traveled to Lakeland, Florida.

There is much more to the band than the typical musicians; there is also the color guard. The of color and motion to the musical performance of the band.

Once you become part of the Marching Knights, the training and practicing is not over. Training for the marching season starts during the summer and doesn't end until the season is over. With that fact in mind, it is easy to see the amount of dedication the members of the Marching Knights put into their band. The Kellam High School Marching Knights are the pride of the school.

VIRGINIA TECHNOLOGY STUDENT ASSOCIATION

The Virginia Technology Student Association is a student organization that exists to promote the importance of technology to everyday life. VTSA also provides an outlet for technology students to go beyond the regular classroom assignments. The group concentrates on projects that further their belief that technology is important for life today and certainly for tomorrow. As our lives are changed by improvements in technology, the students today will be needed to meet the challenges of the highly technological society of the near future. VTSA hopes to help students achieve their goal in a technological field and help them in their transition into the workplace or college. Technology is more than metals and drafting, it's a field of study that will become more important as we grow into this new age of technological advances.

The Future Homemakers of America's (FHA) theme this year is "Health and Wellness." They give programs at monthly meetings on topics such as AIDS, Low calorie cooking, aerobics, substance abuse, self defense, and date rape. They also carry out school and community projects. FHA participated in the Homecoming Parade, hosted Honor Roll Receptions, assisted the Foreign Exchange Student Reception, sponsored a school-wide Holiday Food Drive, prepared Senior Citizen Gift Baskets for Christmas, and have planned to participate in the annual March of Dimes "Walk America" walk-a-thon, and Child Abuse Awareness Week Activities.

As a fundraiser, FHA sold cookbooks and kitchen accessories during the month of November to fund their activities and the expenses of their delegates to attend the state leadership conference in Richmond during the month of April.

DECA is working on four major projects that are based on the four points of the DECA diamond. These four points represent civic consciousness, social intelligence, vocational understanding, and leadership development. The DECA students have involved themselves over the course of the year in activities to promote the ideas of the four points. Those promotional activities included a fashion show at the Rock-ola Café in which DECA members served as models, as well as competitions with other branches of DECA in not only the city but also the region.

DECA concerns itself with the marketing side of business and prepares its members for careers in that aspect of business as well as anything else they decide to do as their occupation. With the DECA experience a student is prepared for just about any problem they could have to face.

Together As One

Sometimes it seems as if the many sports available at Kellam tend to pull the parents, students, spectators and even the players in several different directions at once. The many different sports that are available for the students to participate in — football, field hockey, track, golf, volleyball, basketball, wrestling, gymnastics, softball and many others, add a new dimension to what we call Kellam. Each sport demands a physical and mental payment on the part of the participant. Each sport revolves around a different set of rules and regulations, but yet strives for one goal for its participants. While it may feel better to win, you may learn just as much about yourself and your opponent when you lose. Sports of all kinds were created to provide a learning and growing experience as well as an outlet for the creation of a healthy body and mind. The coaches and players create what the spectators want and hope for at the end of every game, match and meet — the ability to say that we are better prepared than the other team. The goals of the each sport have come together as one in the sports program that Kellam has so proudly produced.

Raising a little spirit

Being a cheerleader doesn't end at the edge of the football field or the door of the gymnasium. The cheerleaders spend so much time together that Nancy Donahoe commented that "you kind of become a family." This 'family' has a great responsibility. The cheerleaders are expected to represent Kellam everywhere you walk into a classroom or welcome the cheerleaders from another school at a sports event.

It's difficult to "be enthusiastic and show good sportsmanship while we're losing," commented Susan Nootnagel. "You're being watched constantly, not by your sponsor, but by the faculty and students. You're expected to be a role model for others; sometimes it is a difficult responsibility to uphold."

"Maintaining a positive attitude at all times is just part of the job," said Nootnagel.

Season of frustrations

At ten o'clock the team walked out of the locker room to be greeted by a roaring crowd congratulating them after their victory. The Knights wished more games were like their victory over former Beach District champions Green Run

This past year was filled with highs and lows for the Knights. After a sluggish start, the season reached its peak with the victory over the heavily favored Stallions. The spirit of the Knights was evident throughout this season of frustration. Even though winning is better the defeats were not as bad knowing that the team was usually up against a tough opponent and that they tried their best. The potential for next year's team offers great hope. "We had a good team with lots of talent, but this year was more of a rebuilding year," said sophomore Richard Cobb

The team is getting ready for next year with a sense of confidence and determination that they have never had before. Coach Scott Boone summed up next year's optimistic feeling by saying, "There is nothing we can't handle."

"I feel important because of the importance Americans give to sports.

Joining any sports team is tough, especially when you're in a different country. Nuria Campa, an exchange student from Spain, arrived in America in August. She soon found herself in a unique situation. Wanting to play basketball in a society that placed much more emphasis on sports than her own country.

Despite the fact that Nuria played basketball in Spain, basketball has a very different intensity here in America. Americans are very intense about sports and that was a new experience for Nuria. Nuria felt that each team member pushes themselves and the other players to be the best

Being from a different country, Nuria had to adjust to more than just the differences on the basketball court. Nuria attended a Catholic all girls school in Spain. Mixing with males in school is new for her. "I've learned a lot about people and school," remarked Nuria.

One disappointment for Nuria is the fact that she will not be graduating with the students with whom she has spent her senior year. Nuria has learned much about America and the people that make up a small part of it.

Pressure to perform

I go out and play for fun... there's always a little pressure." Pressure is what Phil Edwards life has been like for the past few years. Phil lives a life that balances school, sports and activities.

This year at Kellam, Phil has been one of three big reasons for Kellams success on the court. "There's really three guys — John, Ramone and me," said Phil. He believes the success and failure of the team rests on "the five guys on the court." Even though he is one that many depend on, Phil concentrates on his game, not the pressures that others can place on you.

The future for Phil is still up in the air. He is looking at Virginia Wesleyan or perhaps Gardner Webb for college, but whether he will play basketball is unknown. As he put it, "I'm not sure if I wants to play ball in college because of what it does to your G.P.A."

Up for two, Phil Edwards runs toward the basket for two more points against the Cox Falcons.

For many students at the [School Name], the path to success is paved with dedication and hard work. Whether it's on the wrestling mat or in the sewing classroom, these students are proving that their commitment leads to achievement.

One such student is Brian Mason, a wrestler who has consistently performed well in his matches. His dedication to his sport is evident in his focus and determination on the mat.

Another student, Sharon Berry, is excelling in her Independent Living class. Her sewing skills are improving, and she is learning valuable life skills that will serve her well in the future.

These students are just two examples of the many who are striving for excellence at [School Name]. Their dedication and hard work are the keys to their success.

Experience was the key

Behind every great team there is a great coach. This year's field hockey and cross country teams were great in their own ways and their coaches were also great.

Cross country is a sport of endurance on the part of its runners, and their coach has to be able to inspire the team's members. Coach Graham's experience enables him to do just that.

Experience is also a tool of the coaches of field hockey. Coach Stausbaugh, as Miranda Huggins describes, is "the greatest coach the team could have. She has so much experience, so she knows what she's talking about."

Team preparation before a field hockey game includes thinking and talking for the Kellam Field Hockey Team as they got ready for a game against Cox High School.

Challenge of endurance

"Track provides a physical challenge of endurance and speed and a mental challenge of severe concentration," replied Miranda Huggins, junior, about this year's track team. Coach Dennis Slavinsky is an excellent person for the job of training the team as he is the "...best for urging people ..." to do their best. One of the goals of the girl's team is to be the best we can be at each event ... says Miranda. As for the boy's track team, coached by Tom Graham, many feel it is the best team the knights have had for quite some time. "...I think this team is one of the best in the last few years ... it has a lot of depth ..." commented Derrick Johnson, senior.

Stretching out before he begins practice helps Al Najera protect himself against muscle pulls and injuries that may occur during practice.

Decision-making conference between members of the girls' outdoor track team and Coach Slavinsky are common to help iron-out the rough spots of each member's technique.

Proper stance is necessary for Kathleen Murray to get the height and distance needed on an attempt at a discus throw.

Baseball and Grades

The challenges of being at the top

How many people get a chance to go to Princeton and play a sport they love? Todd Tarkenton was able to by maintaining a 3.39 grade point average and playing short-stop for the Kellam baseball team. Tarkenton's grades (he was twenty-fifth in a class of over four hundred) and playing ability gained the recognition of many colleges. Besides Princeton, East Carolina, Virginia Commonwealth, Virginia Wesleyan, and many other colleges have offered him positions on their baseball teams.

Tarkenton plans to major in biology and to practice sports medicine as an orthopedic surgeon.

The art of hit-and-run

This year's softball team and indoor track teams are perhaps the most promising at Kellam. The hopes of the softball team are extremely high as the prepare to meet the beach district this year. The indoor track team fared quite well this year under the supervision of Coach Tom Graham and Coach Dennis Slavinsky. Coach Slavinsky characterized this year's team as "...a small but spirited track team that performed beyond expectations." The boys indoor track team finished with three wins and only one loss, placing them in a tie for second place in the beach district.

Indoor Track 1987-88

Indoor track coach Dennis Slavinsky, who has coached the team for several years, says that is very competitive, as well as demanding. The team's goal is to win the district and state championships. The team's drive and determination showed them an impressive record of 3-1.

Service with a smile

Tennis, to most people, is a boring game of players idly tapping a little green ball over a net. To those who have watched the knight's tennis team, it is much more. Ms. Anderson and the battling Lady Knights have made a seemingly tiresome game into one of stimulating competition. Their disappointing season aside, senior Mary Ann Vergonio observed, "the team had a lot of spirit even though the record didn't show it." The guy's team on the other hand, has a lot of dedication to making this team the best. They are a group of powerful players who know that with constant practice they can be the best.

District hopes in soccer?

Just kicking it around

If we continue to work hard then we have the potential to make it all the way to districts... If Kathy Potter is right, then the girl's soccer team will be a powerful unit as the spirit of competition begins again. Mr. Roberson the girl's new coach, is "...more demanding and does not put up with any idle playing around, he's serious about the game" says Kimberly Taylor senior. With ex-players like Kathy Potter, Kimberly Taylor, Marne Zell and Rita Hagmen, the girls team is bound to do well this year.

The boy's team is expecting new and exciting improvements with this year's team "... We're a young, ambitious team, but we have good potential and we're looking for a pretty successful season," commented Mike Smith. Under the coaching eye of Steve Schmitter, the team is headed for serious competition in the beach district.

Time for class is a rare commodity for Shane Lussier. Shane is finishing an assignment before his first bell earth science class.

Set shots are just part of the game of volleyball. Here Shane is attempting to set up the front line for a spike.

Teenager, athlete and poet create

A passion for life

The old saying, "still water runs deep," is not what one thinks of when you are talking about an athlete. The reputation of athletes has not been one of academic or artistic talent, but finding students of academic and athletic ability is not as difficult as many believe.

Hidden among the roster of this year's volleyball team is an aspiring poet. Shane Lussier, a senior, has been working on his collection of poems since he began writing in the seventh grade and has written over 250 poems. Shane has entitled his collective works as Passions of Life.

Shane said that he "wanted to publish a book of poetry because my poetry is centered on the emotions and feelings my generation has on certain subjects. His poetry is about the struggle and frustrations teenagers experience while trying to make it through the teen years. Love, anger, confusion, disappointment, death and world issues are some of the subjects around which Shane's poetry revolve. "I'm hoping that by the time I'm 20 years old I'll have it published," said Shane.

Shane has always been interested in sports. His favorite sport is baseball and he has played soccer, as well as volleyball here at Kellam. Making time for sports after school, as well as for homework and time to write his poetry are not easy goals. For a student enrolled in advanced placement courses, time is a luxury of which a student has little.

Shane is already making plans to attend college when he moves to Oregon later this year. There he hopes to gain greater training in writing and eventually continue on to gain a masters degree in English. Then he would like to go into the teaching field as a high school or college instructor.

An embarrassing moment with his friends catches Shane Lussier off guard. Students were waiting for the bell to go to seventh bell class.

Together As One

Remember that road is closing in when you is difficult. It becomes very hard trying to figure out how you got there. All the hard work, the many days at school and the drive to reach that point, look at you. You turn around and see so far away and the future you know is the day is here. Kellen's seniors have reached the point where all they have worked for is they have earned it. It is within their reach. Some will feel after 12 years where others will begin their search for a new career. What ever they do they will take with them a part of what Kellen has taught them. From every aspect of the school you have unknowingly picked up traits and habits from these years of time and trust. Every sport and every class you have participated have helped you make it to the end. You have worked so hard to graduation day. They sense you could say that every person every feeling and every relationship you have felt when you have been at Kellen have come together as one to create the you that we all see. In you go congratulations and good luck on whatever career you choose and remember that what you are is what the Kellen experience has helped to make you.

Inspecting your plane is an important part of the pre-flight check. Jeff Mitchell is checking the wings and flaps of his plane.

Checking the fuel level is one of the small details that Mitchell must go through in order to get his pilot's license.

Hoping to be sky high

Imagine the sensation of looking out the window and finding yourself high above the ground. One moment you feel invincible; the next moment terrifyingly small against the backdrop of a clear blue sky. Experiencing this type of excitement would probably frighten most people, but not Jeff Mitchell. This has been his dream since he embarked on his first plane ride at age three. It was only natural that Jeff's interest in flying would grow since he has never lived more than a few miles from a naval air station.

Jeff saw his father, a navy pilot, as a hero and wanted to follow in his footsteps. The footsteps of a navy pilot are not easy ones to follow, but Jeff has already begun the journey. Last summer he enrolled in and completed the ground school portion of training for a pilot's license. In order to receive a license, Jeff has to log fifty hours of flight time. He expects to have his license by the spring of 1988.

To Jeff, flying is not fun and games. He doesn't want people thinking that he wants to be a hot shot "Top Gun" pilot. Jeff believes, "just flying in the navy is good enough."

The feeling you get when flying an airplane was hard for Jeff to describe, but he did say, "the feeling is the ultimate; it's the best thing I could think of doing with my life."

One last check before Mitchell steps inside the plane and soon he'll be on his way to a sky high adventure.

Dancing away the night in the Atlantic Ballroom of the Pavillon Towers is John McShea and his date

Paying for pictures of herself and her date is Cathy Schaeffler. Schaeffler was purchasing the Ring Dance pictures Talking between dances Heather Stone, Wayne Gilbert, and Eric Shearin discuss what they think of the ring dance.

Ring Dance: a one of a kind

The tux is rented, the gown is bought as the night of the ring dance approaches. The flowers were in the refrigerator as the anticipation of slipping into the formal wear grew nearer. Dad's car was washed and polished. The teen in the tux hopped into the car, put his seatbelt on, started the car and hastily drove to pick up his young lady. Butterflies tied his stomach in knots as he knocks on the door that now suddenly seems much larger than before. The door opens and the father stands there grimacing with camera in hand. The young man waits nervously for his date to make her appearance. All of a sudden the young lady entered. Her flowing dress and beautiful appearance lite up the room. She had never looked more beautiful to him than at that moment. As the young man pinned the red rose corsage onto the young ladies dress flashing lights began to burst from what seemed to be every corner of the room. The couple could not leave until the family had captured that special moment on film. Then, almost as quickly as he had arrived, they were both in his car and off to the waiting dance.

When the couple arrived at the Pavillon Towers the gentleman opened the door for the young lady. He then escorted her to the Atlantic Ballroom. Faces of friends greeted them as they entered. The night held many spectacular moments that allowed the couple to have the time of their lives. Ring Dance may have been an ending to many student's junior year, but it also marked the beginning of their senior year.

Together As One

Being in the middle is something's always a difficult place to be. You're not beginning something new, yet you're not quite ready to end it either. This is how it feels to be a junior. This is a time in your life when many confusing signals will be sent your way from friends, parents and even yourself. Relationships seem to start to unravel, the struggle to get along, pay for car, and then the trouble balancing all this with school and your own time can sometimes feel like too much to handle. This is a time when friends and just being yourself become very important to you. Despite all these problems, students at Kellen find a way to make their junior year one of the best years of their life. Kellen juniors find a way to help each other turn the rest of their life into a well-oiled, planned life style. Each year, juniors share their problems and accomplishments in many different ways, and that difference makes the junior class a special group in Kellen. This singular personality that we see is far more than just what a few people want it to be. A little part of every person's brought together to form an unique group we call the Kellen Junior Class.

Following along — his paperback book is Tray Winkerson. He was reading along with the class as his English teacher was explaining that section of the book.

Ready to leave her history class and head for the bus is Tica Ojima.

Together As One

When you stop to think about your life, you begin to realize that it is a series of beginnings. You realize that this is just one of many beginnings in your life. Your sophomore year provides a challenge of a new beginning. It seems that just when you get settled, just when you feel like you really belong, something comes along to upset your balance and create a change. As a sophomore, you feel as if you are beginning again the process of making new friends and getting adjusted to another school. The beginning of your high school life is often confusing and nerve-wracking. So many people — so many different people — around and around every corner. At first you are just another face in the crowd, but soon you settle into a daily routine. Even though this is a new experience, you know that soon you will feel a sense of belonging — a sense of togetherness. Even though your class is composed of hundreds of people, each with a different personality, you know that each individual helps to create a class that is unique. Your beliefs and personalities have come together as one to create the sophomore class that is undeniably you.

An in-class assignment keeps Calvin Wynn busy during his Environmental Science class.

Taking notes during her foods class is Stephanie Geoghegan. The class was discussing the importance of proper nutrition in preparing a meal.

Just a pinch

While preparing a salad dressing for her food management class, Christine Sullivan is measuring the ingredients for her dressing.

1. The first part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the general principles of the theory of the structure of the atom. It is shown that the structure of the atom is determined by the laws of quantum mechanics, and that the structure of the atom is determined by the laws of quantum mechanics.

Together As One

Many people, organizations and activities have come together to create the institution we know as Kellam High School. These groups put together as one to build upon a foundation of knowledge, friendship and understanding. The groups affiliated with Kellam do their very best to maintain a school in which the students and faculty can have a sense of pride. This ideal is shared by many of the people in contact with the school. The feeling that one gets from being part of such an institution reemphasizes the effort and ability of everyone who make Kellam what it is. The students are the life blood of a school, the vital heart that provides the thought and the emotion behind the pride we have for Kellam. In the next few pages we have tried to include each individual and each organization that has helped to give Kellam its heart and soul. From a slow and cautious beginning of an overcrowded school, we have taken the best of us all. We have come together as one to make this year and forever insure that it will be part of our memory.

Celebrity reader, Dr. Melvin—Virginia Beach School's Superintendent, shares with the students of Kellam a reading during the program sponsored as part of the Virginia Reading Month.

'Step' conversation is part of each day's activities for Kellam students as they wait to go to their seventh bell class after lunch.

The image is a very low-quality scan of a document, likely a ledger or a table. It features several columns of text and numbers, but the content is almost entirely illegible due to the poor contrast and resolution. At the top, some faint headers are visible, including "No.", "Date", and "Description". The table appears to have multiple rows of data, with some numbers and text entries that cannot be read. The overall appearance is that of a heavily degraded or underexposed photograph of a printed document.

Late start little student interest created

A struggle against time

I couldn't believe all the applications. It seemed like it was going to be an easy year.

It wasn't long before David Jones, yearbook adviser, realized that the production of the yearbook wouldn't be that easy.

Late nights for Cathy Schaeffler, editor, and Mr. Jones would become commonplace. "It was really tough on me to keep up my grades and get the work done," commented Schaeffler. Schaeffler went on to say that she began to depend more and more on myself to finish the deadlines.

Having to do the yearbook exclusively after school made it difficult on the staff, the editor and the adviser. "It's been really difficult to get students to stay after school," Mr. Jones replied about the staff problems. "they have been in school all day, the last thing they want to do is stay any longer." "I believe yearbooks should be about people because that is what you'll remember about high school — not the sports events or the club activities," Mr. Jones commented.

The inside and cover of the book were designed to bring out the traditional yet practical, aspect of a high school publication.

The theme, "Together As One," came about after two weeks of theme development and some to some moments among the students when deciding on the theme.

longer." Because only a few students would stay each week the progress was slow and cumbersome. Some students tried to do two, and sometimes three jobs at once.

Mr. Jones tried to bring a new approach to the yearbook, both graphically and editorially. "I'll Volume 26 of Floyd E. Kellam High School's Challenger was printed by Hunter Publishing Company in Winston-Salem, North Carolina. The 1988 Challenger had a press run of 865 books and has 192 pages.

Colophon

The paper is a nine inch by twelve inch trim size. Paper stock is 80 pound gloss on color pages of student life section and 80 pound matte for all other pages. The endsheet stock is 80 pound numeral 107 Gunmetal Parchment.

The cover is base material of Lexotone Black #41075 with a Congo grain. The cover design involves an embossed title, school name and date with debossing and foil stamping. The spine and cover theme are gold hot stamped. The cover design for the cover was created by Cathy Schaeffler, Regina Hanlon and David Jones.

The student life section contains eight color pages. The color number 551U was submitted as art for additional color. Color photos were processed and printed by Banecon's One Hour Photo.

Caledonia was used for all body copy. The body copy is 10/12. The outlines are 8/10 with a bold lead of Quadrata Bold, the remaining outline copy is in Quadrata. Headlines are in Quadrata Bold, Caledonia, Metroblack, Eurostile Bold Extended and Helvetica Bold. Mistral was used for the theme identification on division pages and for quote boxes on all appropriate pages.

Twenty, 30, 40 and 60-percent screens were used throughout the book along with one, two, three and 12-point rules. All photos are bordered with a close register one-point rule.

Page numbers are in 14/16 Caledonia Bold with section identification in 10/12 Caledonia Bold.

The index was set in 6/6.5 Caledonia with organizations in 6/6.5 Caledonia Bold.

Together As One

Together As One

Through the year many people have become well known because of their sports ability, their academic achievements or just simply their presence in the hallways. Despite the reason, the year can be looked back upon as one of great accomplishment and sometimes great sorrow.

Together we have given meaning to 1987-1988 and look forward to making our mark on the next year. It may be a different time and a different group of people, but we would have to agree, for us to accomplish all we have, requires us to act and react as one.

Goob, your a really Hey! your a really Sweet guy. + i like your philosophy on not being just hi,bye friends. you never bugged me we you followed us at the mall. I was just kidding with you I wish my hair would do like yours maybe one day, you'll show me exactly how you do it + i'll show you how i do mine. maybe i'll see ya over the summer but im sure i'll see ya next year + maybe we will be in some classes together!!

Boober, Heyo Thanks
 for all them letters.
 (4.8) I will see you next school year hopefully.
 I really have missed all you guys. I glad that I met you this year even if my friends do think you are weird. I will see you again.

 Boober, I'm glad I Got to know you!!! You are a very special person. I feel very lucky to have known
 you. Don't ever change.
 I hope I see you next yr.
 Love
 Dawn

Chris, (because I refuse to call you Goob)
 You have been such a wonderful friend to me.
 You helped me get through ~~at~~ alot of rough times. I'm gonna miss you next year alot. It's hard to leave behind real friends. Please don't forget to KIT over the years. Maybe mine + William's kids and yours + Diane's kids could play together. -Oh, stop being so moody, you'll end up with an ulcer.
 Well Goob - yuck I hate that (but see, I said it)
 I want you to have a wonderful summer + life.
 I know I'll see ya 'round. I wish I could have known Diane 'cause she must be really nice to have turned you!!

Goober!
 It was real cool
 meeting you this year.
 You're about the only person that is similar to myself. We have to get together this summer and party balls. As the saying goes "No Balls, No Glory". That's what I live by. Give me a call sometime 340-8512
 later or

Chris,
 Well I have to start out by saying YOU'RE A GREAT Guy!! Thanks for being such a great friend and I'm glad we had Eng. together. You're a wonderful person and I hope you always will be. Don't ~~see~~ ever change! English wouldn't have been the same w/o ya! Call me sometime over the summer + I better see ya over the summer + next year! Love ya 420-2000

CHRIS

What a year huh?
Mr. Weiss' class got a little "mundane", but we lived through it didn't we?
You've been a great friend this year, and I know that you're someone I'll never forget (that's good).
Raise hell as usual this summer as usual, and I'll look you up next year! Hope you stay w/ Diane next year too. If not, you'll find someone I guess.
Well, I'll wrap it up now.
Bout time, huh?

P.S. Don't Bleach your hair!

If you want to talk,

Goobar aka. Chris,
hey-there sweetie!
What's up? Not much here as usual. You are one of the sweetest guys I know and I am so glad that I had the pleasure in meeting you. I'm glad I did. You're a sweetie who's caring, cute and as normal as I am! I hope to see you next year in some of my classes and in the hall. Don't forget me. When I say hi to you in the hall next year or in the mall
I hope you say hi back!
Well, I'd better go. See ya!
Bye Bye!
Love ya!
